

Talkin' Turkey

Over At The Park

Voelcker Park master plan is moving along nicely. On October 4th, over one hundred visitors joined the San Antonio City Parks staff and other lovers of parks to enjoy “Wild Wacky Webs”.

There were some very fine and creative spiders made by big and little folks with the assistance of the parks staff. Those not into spiders enjoyed the beautiful weather to walk, stroll, and run along the pathways that gave them the great experience of seeing the interior of the property.

Summerfield neighborhood is working with staff on a potential tree planting program, while Bonnie Conner, Julia Diana and Krystal Strong met to discuss potential partnership opportunities with school districts, universities and agencies related to the educational piece in the park.

Fisher-Heck, an architectural firm, is working on the homestead documents in order to finalize the historic structures report. The Historic Design and Review Committee will take a look at this on October 15th.

On November 1st from 9 am till noon, Phil Stratton, a local expert, will “talk turkey”. Do they really drown when looking at the sky when it rains? We will find out!

More to come in December – hopefully the Salado Creek Greenway dedication will take place and HOLD THE DATE – December 6th 3 pm- 5pm, Voelcker Open House and Native American Storytelling.
